About this report

This report is by the University of Melbourne.

This report is about the Improving Disability Employment Study

Australian Government
Australian Research Council

The study was funded by a government grant.

The study is about:

- people with disability looking for work

why finding work is hard

- what work is like for people with disability

Who was in the study

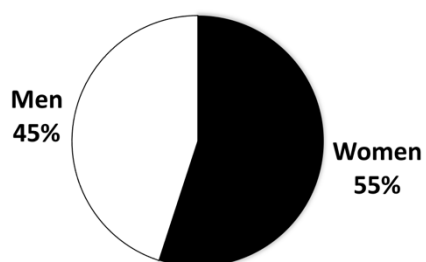

369 people with disability

They were all looking for a job

85% were born in Australia

55% were women

79% completed more study after high school

About the study

We asked people with disability

- to complete a survey
- the survey asked about looking for a job

The survey also asked about

- Disability

- Work

- Disability Employment Services

- Health

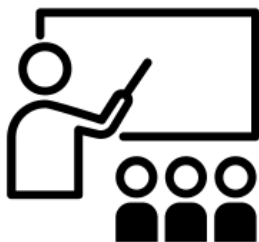

What we found out

63% had applied for a job.

65% looked for a job in the newspaper or on the internet.

32% were studying to help them find work in the future.

What we learnt about barriers to work

A barrier is anything that makes it harder for someone to do something

- Half of people said that their health condition or disability was a barrier to work.

- 2 out of 5 people said a lack of jobs close to where they live was a barrier to work.

- 2 out of 5 people said not having a qualification was a barrier to work.

A Qualification is a special skill or certificate that someone gets after finishing a course.

- 1 out of 3 people said a lack of confidence was a barrier to work.

What we know about Disability Employment Services (DES)

DES means Disability Employment Service

This service helps people with disability find a job.

The survey asked about this service.

2 out of 3 people said DES was “good” or “very good” at finding them the right work.

Half of people said DES was “good” or “very good” at finding the right training for them.

2 out of 3 people said DES was “good” or “very good” at helping them apply for a job.

2 out of 3 people said DES was “good” or “very good” at helping them get ready for a job interview.

2 out of 3 people said DES was “good” or “very good” at supporting them to feel confident.

What we will do with what we found

Now we know more about what it is like for people with disability who are looking for work.

We will try to make looking for work easier for people with disability.

We will try to make getting a job easier for people with disability.
